Dear readers,

Welcome to the first issue of Volume 44th of the Revista Colombiana de Estadística (Colombian Journal of Statistics). I would like to thank all the authors for choosing our journal as a means of disseminating their research. I also thank the referees for their careful and meticulous work. They did a great job reviewing a large number of papers. I express special recognition to the members of the committees for their valuable support and our assistant Patricia Chávez for her dedication and commitment to the various administrative and editing activities of the journal.

The average review time has been extended due to the pandemic. We apologize to the authors and appreciate their patience. We have tried to make the review processes as fast as possible maintaining scientific standards.

This issue includes nine articles (two in the theoretical section and seven in the applied section) covering a variety of subjects in different fields of statistics. Time series, spatial statistics, multivariate analysis, new probability distributions, Bayesian analysis, reliability, and latent space models, are some of the topics covered. All articles show theoretical and methodological advances combined with analysis of simulated or real data. We have in this issue authors from Spain, Italy, Colombia, Brasil, India, and Venezuela. In this way, the objectives proposed by the Colombian Journal of Statistics are fulfilled, that is, to have an international character and to cover research and application topics in a broad spectrum of statistics.

Our website has been modified to facilitate the reception of manuscripts and communication with the authors. Submission and reviewing processes are carried out completely through our website. This has allowed us to improve the efficiency of the revision and publication procedures. The journal is contained in many bibliographic databases worldwide and it is indexed, among others, in Scimago Journal and Country Rank (rank Q3) and Publindex (B category). These ranks
