

GUIDELINES FOR PRESENTATION OF ARTICLES

Maguaré. Journal of the Department of Anthropology

Maguaré is a biannual academic journal published since 1981 by the Department of Anthropology at Universidad Nacional de Colombia. Its main purpose is to publish original pieces and work that contribute to anthropology and other social sciences. Maguaré fosters and supports thematic, theoretical and methodological openness. It seeks to publish anthropologically-inspired texts produced by scholars from other social sciences and the humanities, such as history, sociology, literature, psychology, social work, among others.

Maguaré's editorial staff is composed of a director affiliated to the Department of Anthropology at Universidad Nacional de Colombia, Bogotá; an editor; an Editorial Committee, whose members are professors at several Colombian anthropology departments; and an International Scientific Committee, composed by distinguished professors. These two committees assist the editorial process.

The Journal disseminates several categories of papers and articles, which include: 1) papers based on academic research that present detailed results of research projects; "artículos de reflexión" or reflexive or critical papers that deal with research of a specific subject, based on original sources; 3) short papers: brief documents that present original, preliminary or partial research results; 4) literature surveys about relevant topics to anthropology and the social sciences, based on at least fifty bibliographic references;

5) translation: translations of classic or contemporary texts, or transcriptions of historical documents of special interest for Maguaré; 6) monographic reports, based on a graduate or undergraduate thesis or dissertation.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC REFERENCE SYSTEM

Maguaré follows the author-date bibliographic reference system espoused by the Chicago Manual of Style, 16th edition, available at <http://www.chicagomanualofstyle.org>. This system uses parenthetical references for in-text citation and a list of references at the end of each piece. The information to be included in parentheses is the following: author's last name, year of publication of the work, and page number. For example: (Benavidez 1998, 125). When citing a work by various authors, the following models are used: two and three authors (Shepsle and Bonchek 2005, 45), and four or more authors (Barnes Et ál. 2010, 25). When citing an author quoted by another, the following format is used: (Marzal, quoted in Pease 1982, 11-12). The bibliographical reference list shall follow the Chicago Manual of Style system, with the modifications we have made for publications in Spanish.
